Observations respecting the invitation of Mr. Jefferson to Thomas Paine to come over to America.

No. II.

A PUBLIC measure so singular, so astonishing, so degrading to executive dignity and so foreign from the usual business of national diplomacy, as was the letter of invitation to THOMAS PAINE, written by Mr JEFFERSON and presented by an ambassador of the United States, cannot fail to excite, together with indignant sensations, a strong curiosity to investigate its motives. Had Mr. PAINE arrived to our shores, uninvited; or had he even come, invited by individuals of a subordinate grade, his arrival would have been announced among the trivial occurrances of the day. It was the extraordinary manner of his introduction amongst us, that has attached to this self-degraded man a sufficient degree of importance to render him an object of public notice.

It has lately been stated to the public, in terms of exultation, by some of the democratic party that there are already nearly two hundred thousand European emigrants in this country; and every year, and every month brings a large accession to this enormous mass of foreigners.—They crowd our cities—they direct our presses—they influence and decided our elections—they sit in our public councils—they govern our finances—they know their own numbers—they feel their own strength; and they speak to the nation, from time to time, in the language of menance and scorn. Will not their numbers, merely from spontaneous emigrations, be soon sufficient to give us liberty?—Was it necessary that the pen of the august President of the United States, in connection with diplomatic agency, should be employed in inviting over European citizens to our shores?—or if such a strange necessity really existed, the selection is still more strange.

Among all the men in Europe, who might have been introduced by diplomatic invitation, to come over and help us, was there no man so deserving, so needed as THOMAS PAINE? By what wonderful fatality has it happened that the man, who is emphatically the scorn of Europe, should be selected and distinguished by Mr. JEFFERSON, as the object of his high esteem; and should be affectionately invited to incroporate with the people of this country!—or even if it were necessary to make the selection from among the citizens of the Gallic nation, was there none among all those who had waded through the deep and abominable filth of the French revolutions, that migh challenge a competition and a preference?—Why pitch upon the man, that had excited qualms in the bowels of France herself, and whom she was eager to disgorge?—Why pitch upon the man, against whose blasphemies thousands of pious parents, in this country, had, in their dying moments, solemnly warned their children! Why pitch upon the man, that had basely insulted this whole nation, by pouring a torrent of foul abuse and blackguardism upon the venerable WASHINGTON, who was emphatically the Father of the country!

Mr. Jefferson is the representative of a great nation, a nation, upon which no inconsiderable degree of the attention of the world is fixed. And what must the world think, what must the wisest and best men in Europe think, while they behold him stooping from his dignified station down, down, down, to a diplomatic correspondence with Thomas Paine; to the bestowment upon him of high esteem, and to an affectionate invitation to that French citizen to come over to America? The whole nation is degraded by such a spectacle. It is exposed to the pointed finger of derision; and must prepare to receive the tribute of contempt.

In the history of nations, a formal mission from the head and representative of a great & respectable people to an unofficial individual of a foreign land, is an unusual thing. It is a species of diplomacy that rarely happens; and it naturally presupposes an uncommon degree of worth in the individual, who has been thus distinguished. Whenever the sublime head & principal organ of a great nation, by a mission in the solemn form of an embassy, calls upon a foreign subject or citizen to migrate, and to vouchsafe to the country of the sign fied petitioner, the favor of his presence, it presupposes the expectation of important services from the invited foreigner. What good services can this country expect from Thomas Paine? I pause for a reply.

EUSEBIUS.

FALSE PRAISE.

"HAVE I not said some silly thing?" was the exclamation of a man of no common renown, when he found himself applauded by silly people. What an excellent standard to measure merit! and how ridiculously mean many a great man would appear if he tested his worth by the same principles. The author of that observation, saw how despicable it is to be praised by the weak and the wicked. He perceived that if vice and ignorance undertook to support his reputation, they would scorch every wreath that might decorate his memory, every laurel that might sprout from his tomb. The malignity of enemies was harmless, but the kindness of such friends was death. He dreaded more from the tubes of vile and loathsome eulogy, than from the most embittered shafts of slander.

"There is a praise,
"That doth blacken and debauch the wearer,
"'Tis worse than calumny."

False praise is the shortest road to oblivion. It is a kind of irony covertly conveying the reproach of sense and the detestation of honesty. A man's reputation may sometimes be sunk by the pressure of censure; but clogged with this incumbrance, he sinks by his own weight, and "to ascend is adverse." Yet false praise has many a disciple. It is a counterfeit coin, much sought after by those whose goods will not command the genuine currency. A person born, not "with silver spoons nor wooden ladles in his mouth," but with ambition deeply in his heart, who has too great paucity of talents and virtues to rank him with the truly illustrious, is usually solicitous for this kind of reward. History, too unfortunately, exhibits an abundance of such characters.—They are swarming on every leaf of ancient and modern record, and as we approach towards our own times, they swell to such numbers and such enormity, as to compel the eye from the page. Even America, though we should hope separated from the evils of the old world, has not escaped the contagion of example, nor the thraldom of folly. Our present Chief Magistrate, however dignified in station, and "all President as he is," has yet a secret, insatiate lorging for that praise which is loathsome as the Siroc, and deleterious as death. Any thing that favors of eulogy, or of worship, however nauseous, is delectable to his palate and digests in his stomach. With silent pleasure he sees himself puffed by his obsequious servants, as at once the first philosopher, the greatest writer, and the most consummate politician of the age. Before him the fame of Newton darkens, Addison and Robertson dwindle, and Montsquieu is annihilated. In human arts and acquirements Europe has been repeatedly challenged to produce his peer; but Europe, very wisely, doth not see fit to accept the challenge. Europe acknowledges that in certain ARTS he is equalled, at most, but by one man on the eastern continent: and if that one man is doomed to descend to the tomb of Robespierre, the philosopher of Monticello will be unmatched in these arts throughout the world.

NEW YORK, December 15.

Captain Wadbury, of the brig William Pitt, ſpoke on the firſt inſt. the ſch'r Fame, from Port Republican, out 14 days, the captain of which aſſured him that the Negroes had ſucceeded in taking Port Republican by ſtorm, and had put all the white men, women, and children in the place to the ſword. The American veſſels in the harbor ſailed in company with the Fame, under convoy of a French frigate.

The ſhip Factor, Caldwell, of and for this port, out 63 days from Grenock, went athore on Monday night at Shrewſbury Inlet. The paſſengers came up yeſterday afternoon in the pilot boat Tryall, and inform us, that no material damage had been diſcovered in the veſſel by this accident, and that they ſuppoſed ſhe would be got off without much injury.

By the arrivals here yeſterday from Grenock and Briſtol, we have received London, Briſtol, Liverpool and Glaſgow papers, to the 3d ult.

Great Britain is putting on a hoſtile appearance. In all her ſea ports, the greateſt activity prevails, in recruting for ſeamen, and victualling and manning her fleets with the greateſt expedition.—Ships of war and packets, victualed for ſix months, with ſealed orders, have ſailed from England in every direction. The ſquadron which recently ſailed up the Mediterranean from Gibraltar is to be reinforced by ſeveral additional ſhips from England; and the command of the force, in that ſea, is to be conferred on General Oakes.

The cauſe of theſe hoſtile appearances, is imputed to the recent interference of France, in the internal affairs of the Swiſs Cantons—and of a ſuſpicion, that ſhe means to renew her deſigns upon Turkey and Egypt, and to obtain poſſeſſion of Malta. The Britiſh, however ſeem determined to reſiſt the deſigns of this mighty Coloſſus, which aims at univerſal power; and, if not prevented, would beſtride the whole world.

The markets in England, with very little variation, continued much the ſame as by former advices.

Three per cent. Conſols were at 67 ½ Omnium 10 ¼ dis.

Extract of a letter from a reſpectable mercantile houſe in Greenock, to a merchant in this city, dated Nov 3.

"Cotton is again on the ſtart and will be more ſo ſhould the preſent appearances of war continue. Bonaparte has ſtill an itching after his favorite plan of the expediton to Egypt. Our government finds fault with him on the ſcore of uſurping too much power, by dictating laws to Switzerland, and call on the other powers in Europe to interfere with France, in order to preſerve the balance of power, otherwiſe as they ſay, which is very true, there will be no end to his ambition, and in time, if permitted to make ſuch graſps, he may dictate laws to the whole world. Our government at preſent are keeping a watchful eye over him, and making ſome little preparation, however, this blaſt may blow over.

Good Coffee is alſo on the riſe and will ſtand in the ſame ſituation as cotton ſhould hoſtilities commence.

The ſhip Lydia, arrived this morning from Greenock in 38 days. She brings papers to the 2d of November, the one of this date we have juſt ſeen: It ſtates, that at a Cabinet Council it had been determined, that the Britiſh troops ſhould ſtill keep poſſeſſion of ſuch ports as by the treaty of Amiens were to have been given up, and which had not then been evacuated; and that orders for that purpoſe had accordingly been diſpatched.

From a Glaſgow paper of Oct. 28.

LONDON, Oct. 25.

Several letters have been received in town from Switzerland, all of which agree in the determination of the brave Swiſs to reſiſt to the laſt extremity. The letter of the Chief Conſul was received at Berne with ſenſations of the utmoſt horror and indignation. In the audience given to Citizen Rapp, he declared that if the Swiſs did not immediately ſubmit to the will of the Chief Conſul, an army of 30,000 French had orders to march in five days into the country, and to lay Switzerland waſte by fire and ſword. He was referred to the Congreſs at Schwitz, but the Berneſe, as far as concerned themſelves, rejected the terms with diſdain.

A meeting of the Cabinet Council having been held on Saturday, a number of reports have in conſequence got into circulation, one of which is, that government has received an anſwer from Paris favorable to the cauſe of Switzerland. Of this, however, we cannot ſpeak with any confidence.

Bills have been poſted in Portſmouth and Goſport, for entering ſeamen for the Penelope and Apollo frigates.

Portſmouth, Oct. 24. Sailed yeſterday, the St. Florenzo frigate, and Raccon brig, for ſea, with ſealed orders: the former ſuppoſed to be for the Weſt-Indies, and the latter for the coaſt of Guinea.

GLASGOW, Oct. 28.

A detailed account of Bonaparte's new plan of indemnities was received by a Dutch mail which arrived on Monday. By this plan, the Grand Duke of Tuſcany, the Emperor's brother, gains little or nothing more than he had by former one, and the Stadthalder's portion is diminiſhed.

The anſwer of the Diet at Schwitz to Bonaparte, in conſeqeonce of his proclamation of the 30th September, addreſſed to the Swiſs nation, declares "that the movements which have taken place in Switzerland are not the reſult of a ſpirit of party, and that the Swiſs nation has no other object in view than to make uſe of the right which the claims of giving herſelf a central and cantonal conſtitution, founded on her poſition and her wants; a ſacred and precious right, which you deigned yourſelf to enſure her by the treaty of Luneville: The Swiſs have nothing more at heart than to attain a ſtate of repoſe in which, under the ſhield of a mild and juſt government, each inhabitant may enjoy his property and his exiſtence."

By later dates, we learn, that the French papers boaſt that all the difficulties of Switzerland are finally adjuſted to their ſatisfaction. It appears, however that two diſcordant voices are heard in her councils, and the nation is torn by two parties, French and Swiſs.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 16.

Arrived ſhip Friendſhip, Sherman, Peterſburg; Narciſſa, Fatio, Havanna; ſch'r Belvidere, Potter, Norfolk; Sally & Lydia, Smith, Peterſburg and City Point; Edward and Edmund, Veacock, Turk's-Iſland; Ann & Mary, Coulter, C. Francois; ſloop Patty, Newton, Richmond; Independence, Herbert, do. Olive Branch, Pearſon, do.

Cleared, ſnow Nancy, Watt, Dublin; brig Paragon, Puel, Georgetown, S. C. ſch'r Mary, Hexford, Halifax; Waldo, Cuſtis, Norfolk; ſloop Hawk, Coleman, Nantucket.

Arrived, ſch'r Edward and Edmund, Veacock, from Turk's Iſland, ſailed from thence on the 24th Nov. in company with the Minerva, Pain, of New-London, for New-York; ſchooner Roger Williams, Spooner, of Providence, R. I. do. ſloop Lucy, Bailey, of and for New-London.

Dec. 3, in lat. 37, 20, N. long. 73, 30, W. ſpoke the ſchooner Maria, Ramſdell, of Philadelphia for Nevis. The Edward and Edmund in coming up the bay, ran aſhore on Joe Flogger. The pilot, mate & two hands, went in the boat with an anchor, to get the ſch'r off; but the boat and hands never returned. Capt. V. was obliged the next morning to cut his cable, and follow ſome veſſel for aſſiſtance, having only 2 boys on board. Capt. V. was fortunate in receiving ſome aſſiſtance from Capt. Fatio, of the ſhip Narciſſa, whoſe friendly attention was peculiarly favorable to the preſervation of the veſſel.

Yeſterday afternoon came up the faſt ſailing ſch'r Ann and Mary, Capt. Joſeph Coulter, from Cape Francois. By this arrival we expected additional intelligence of the political ſtate of St Domingo; but on enquiry we were diſappointed, as the ſch'r ſailed on the 17th November and only brings a confirmation of the late dreadful troubles, which diſtract that country.

Brig Beaver, Stephenſon, from hence, arrived at Cape-Francois after a paſſage of 10 days.

Ship Roſe, Claſby, of and from this port, bound to Cork and Liverpool, was ſpoke Nov. 26, in lat. 38, 18, long. 70, 80.

Sch'rs Alexander, Reynolds, & Eliza, Baker, of Philadelphia, were at St. Bartholomews the 20th Oct. to ſail in 14 days for this port.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 20.

We this day preſent our readers with the Preſident's Meſſage, which was read to the houſe on Wedneſday. It is a pretty delicate little thing; the very image of its father. Like him, it flatters the people, talks* about economy, and plenty of money without taxes. The dear little thing ſpeaks of its wealth, with as much confidence, as if it had been acquired by its own exertions. It was really laughable to ſee the little urchin, ſtrutting & viewing itſelf in the borrowed plumes of its predeceſſors. A circumſtance had like to have deſtroyed this tender offspring of our beloved Preſident. Its friends were ſo pleaſed with the proſpect of its appearing, that they determined to celebrate its birth, by a diſcharge of ſixteen guns at the navy yard. This to be ſure, did not very well accord with the profeſſions of republican ſimplicity & plainneſs of its father. They knew how to conſtrue theſe profeſſions much better than the people. They were accordingly anticipating the happineſs, that they would enjoy at ſeeing their little favorite uſhered into the world, with ſo much noiſe and eclat. The cannons were loaded and the matches lit for more than a week. A flag was ſent to the Capitol, to give the ſignal to the navy yard. When ſuddenly the Preſident got alarmed, a council was called, and it was conſidered that the infant, from the weak and decrepit ſtate of the parent, and the little nouriſhment with which it had been ſupplied, and even that little having been borrowed, and might not therefore be favorable to its conſtitution, would not probably be ſufficiently ſtrong and healthy for ſo boiſterous a reception, it was, therefore, on mature reflection, determined to order the cannon not to be fired. The infant was announced to the world with no other noiſe than the muſical and ſonorous voice of the midwife.

The Preſident's Council judged correctly, as to its ſituation. It is in a very weak and ſickly ſtate, and as it owed its birth to borrowed or ſtolen nouriſhment as ſoon as theſe ſupplies are ſtopped, the poor thing muſt certainly periſh. Its tomb will be but ſlightly cloſed, as its father is ſoon expected to follow, and will be placed in the ſame grave. A mourning ring is already preparing for the diſconſolate parent, with the following motto: 'Not dead, but gone before.'

[Waſh. Fed.]

NOTE.

* Do not be ſurpriſed gentle reader, that a new born infant is made to talk. We have many well recorded inſtances of birds and beaſts converſing with each other. It ſurely is not as wonderful, that the new born ſon of a Philoſopher, ſhould be able to ſpeak in this age of reaſon, as that in an age of darkneſs and ſuperſtition, animals without the light of reaſon, ſhould be able to utter grave maxims of morality, or crack jokes upon each other.
